PLANES GROUNDED, BUT BLACKOUT GOES ON JUST THE SAME

Morrisville Air Raid Wardens Stand Watch For Six Hours

EIGHT OTHER TOWNS

Upper Bucks County Stages
Blackout, But Weather
Grounds Planes

Airplanes which were supposed to take part in a mock air raid on Morrisville yesterday failed to appear and air raid wardens spent six hours of watchful waiting yesterday afternoon but when dusk settled not a single plane had been spotted.

Apparently the planes that were supposed to take part in the practice demonstration of air raid defense got an inkling of the elaborate preparations set up by the borough and decided to call the whole thing off. Numerous transports on the New York to Washington run kept the spotters busy scanning the skies, but it took more than one plane at a time to scare the Morrisville lookouts.

More than 15,000 residents of eight communities in Bucks County stood by in utter darkness from 10 p. m. until 10:15 while flights of bombers hunted above them, theoretically. The bombers, 14 of them, were to have flown from Mitchell Field, N. Y., for the demonstration but were grounded by weather.

But lack of a mock attack did nothing to dampen the enthusiasm of the air raid wardens and their aids.

At 9:55 the Quakertown fire siren blared a warning and the streets were cleared. Five minutes later the whole section was blotted out.

Centering at Quakertown, the blackout section included Quakertown borough, Richland township, Milford township, Trumbauersville, Milllandtown, Springfield township and Springfield.

So thorough were the precautions that two ambulances completely staffed with doctors and nurses stood by, as did two fire companies. The streets and roads were patrolled by a special detail of 80 emergency police.

Even phone service was given over exclusively to defense for the duration of the raid.

The demonstration was staged under the direction of three wardens for upper Bucks county. Chief of Police Harry Welch, of Quakertown; Norman Detweiler, newspaper editor, and August Wackerman, deputy sheriff.

SCHOOL DIRECTORS LEARN OF NEW COURSE

Sarah Trumbower in Charge of
First Aid Course at Sell-
Perk School

FACULTY IS ENROLLED

SELLERSVILLE, Oct. 15.—Members of the Sellersville-Perkasie high school joint school board were given a description of a new first aid course being offered to members of the faculty here in connection with the defense movement.

Sarah Trumbower, of this place, the school nurse, is directing the course, according to the supervising principal, Lewis N. Snyder, who is also taking the course. Fifteen persons are receiving instructions from Miss Trumbower. Another member of the group is Helen Plummer, instructor of nurses at Grand View Hospital. Others are faculty members from the two towns.

Surplus food made available for schools has been received from the Federal government as an aid to underprivileged persons. This is being used at the school cafeteria, Mr. Snyder informed the board.

Robert Ambacher, a member of the Sell-Perk athletic committee, said an attempt will be made to reduce the sports deficit by conducting some benefit entertainment this year.

Sellersville directors delayed their regular meeting this week to view the damage that had been done by flames that started in the basement because of a short circuit. Fortunately the fire burned itself out only a few inches from an oil soaked floor on the first story of the building.

"Dave" Landreth To Be Speaker Here Tonight

The Fathers' Association will meet tonight in the cafeteria of the high school at eight o'clock. The program will be in charge of Charles Bowen, Fred Featherstone and Michael Pedrick.

A buffet luncheon will be served and all members are urged to attend the meeting.

The 75 committee chairmen and workers who were present indicated that approximately $3,000 might still be expected.

Chairman Keller congratulated the men on their fine showing which compared very favorably with other years and asked that every man do his best to see that all previous contributors were contacted this year.

Colored moving pictures of the camp swimming pool were shown as the concluding feature of the meeting.

Bristol's total for the campaign amounted to $2,589.21. The Rohm & Haas contributions are included in this amount.

DISCUSS REASONS FOR ALCOHOLIC INDULGENCE

Social Pressure Believed One of Main Reasons, W. C.
T. U. Members State

OCTOBER MEETING

The October meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held at the home of Mrs. Harry Neher, Radcliffe street, last evening, with Mrs. Harry Headley presiding.

After the singing of "America the Beautiful," the devotional period was led by Mrs. William DuHamel, who took for her subject "Christ and the Rich Young Man," pointing out that ordinary morality with rigid observance of precepts and laws is not enough to inherit eternal life, but that we must realize the conflict between the world in which ruling forces pass with the passing of time, and that other world in which only eternal values have the mastery! To know the will of God for us is the most important thing in our life and knowing it, and living it, so help to bring in the Kingdom of God to earth.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. Raymond Bewick, and the treasurer's report given by Miss Jane Rogers. Plans for attendance at the state convention to be held in Philadelphia from October 16th to 20th were made. Ten members plan to attend the banquet Friday evening.

A discussion as to why people drink, then took place, it being the consensus of opinion that at first it is through curiosity and social pressure. They continue to drink because of social pressure, seeking release. Appetite, habit and addiction, and lack of information were also blamed. Few of the younger drinkers have any knowledge of the physical effects of alcohol, it was stated. The need for alcohol education for youth and adults is especially important at this time, was a point stressed.

Scientific temperance education instruction, where experimentation is the usual mode of teaching the facts of alcohol concerning the human body is gaining more prominence in the school system.

After the blessing, a pleasant social hour ensued. The November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. DuHamel.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

While making milk delivery rounds on Monday, George Trauger, of Doylestown, discovered a fire in the garage at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Reppert, Dyer's Hill, near Danboro, and saved the car from complete destruction.

According to a Doylestown fireman, the car was almost destroyed by the flames which are believed to have been caused by a short circuit. The firemen managed to get the car, which was last year's model, out of the garage and saved the building from burning.

A fireman said that the owner of the car had trouble with the car on Sunday evening and that he had to have it towed from the County Seat to his garage.

Thinking it was some motor trouble he put the car into the garage but it probably short-circuited and burst into flames.

So intense was the heat in the interior of the car, which is a sedan, that various metallic parts and fixtures were melted.

The motor was not badly burned.

AWAIT APPROVAL OF SCHOOL BLD'G PROJECT

Plans Ready for $60,000 Proposed Structure To Be Built
At Morrisville

WPA TO PROVIDE FUNDS

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 15.—The school authorities here are awaiting the approval by WPA headquarters in Washington of the proposed $60,000 four-room school building at the site of the present Capitol View wooden structure. The plans and specifications already drawn have been approved by the Board of Education and the Department of Public Instruction.

With the national defense program on full steam, any delay in the approval of the project as submitted seems to be from lack of skilled labor for the job. The local Board of Education had originally planned to erect the building itself but because of the heavy financial burden was unable to do so, and, therefore, sought WPA assistance.

Estimated costs are placed at $25,000 for Morrisville to pay for materials and $35,000 for the WPA to pay for labor costs. As a result of the work, Morrisville's school taxes have been raised from 25 to 27 mills on property tax and from $3 to $4 per capita. Despite this, the rate is the same as it was eight years ago.

Numerous complaints have been the cause for action on a new building. The present wooden building is in poor condition and is the borough's worst school, all others being brick. Plans call for a four-room building and a basement where showers and lockers for use of students playing at nearby Robert Morris Field might be available.

Blew & Son, of Philadelphia, are architects of the new Capitol View School. When the project is finally approved in Washington, Morrisville Borough will ask for bids for the building and basement separately from the equipment in the basement.

Members of the Board of Education building committee include Chairman Alvin R. Pratt, William O'Neill, Joseph Heenan and Leonard Ferry. The school will take about a year to build.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

As Headless As Ever

Washington, Oct. 14. AFTER eighteen months in which unlimited funds and unrestricted authority have been given the President, the three things which enfeeble our defense effort at the start still interfere terribly with its speed, its size and its effectiveness.

Though he has twice reorganized it, Mr. Roosevelt has done little to lessen this hampering effect.

NEITHER his own press conference reassurances; nor Mrs. Roosevelt's Pollyannish platitudes over the air; nor optimistic statements of Administration spokesmen; nor the enormous output of the publicity agencies; nor the immensity of the awarded contracts alter the fact that the material we are sending the British still flows in an exceedingly thin stream and not in the great flood anticipated by them and promised by us. Nor do they alter the further fact that the prospects of the great flood in the near future still remain pretty poor.

THESE three enfeebling things can be listed as follows: First, there is a vast confusion, inevitable in a swollen and uncoordinated organization loaded with many times as many jobholders as can be of any conceivable use and affected at the top with incompetency, duplication and political feuding. The second thing is the lack of a firm labor policy by which the delay due to strikes in defense plants could be minimized, the exploitation of the crisis for their own purposes by racketeering labor leaders ended and the full productive capacity of the defense industry truly realized.

THE third thing is the absence of a single, responsible, individual head of procurement, comparable in authority to the head of production.

Three Slightly Burned In Rohm & Haas Fire

Three men were burned in a fire at the Rohm & Haas plant here yesterday afternoon. The fire took place inside the plant in the plexiglass department.

Sammy Moffo, 910 Pond street, former professional boxer and well known in sporting circles in Bristol, sustained burns of both arms and legs, and perhaps a sprained ankle.

Charles Orr, 502 Pond street, was burned slightly on the right arm. Joseph Cordisco, better known as "Little Joe," was slightly burned on the left arm.

When the fire broke out the Bristol Consolidated Department was called, but did not get into service. The blaze was extinguished by the fire department of the Rohm & Haas plant, and there was no loss.

Bristol firemen were called out twice yesterday to fight grass fires. One was along the Newport Road and one last evening at Fourth avenue.

EMERGENCY POLICE ARE ASKED TO REPORT AT ONCE

Caps and Badges To Be Distributed; Must Be Obtained
Before Sunday Noon

PLAN TO CONDUCT TEST

The volunteer emergency police force which has been organized in Bristol in connection with home defense is to be given caps and badges at once. Every district chief and every recruit is asked to report not later than Sunday noon at Bristol Municipal Building, to procure the caps and badges. Each recruit will be asked to sign for his cap and badge.

The caps are gray oversea caps and the badges are white with red and blue lettering.

The badges are a white background with the lettering "Bucks County Emergency Police" in blue and the number is in red.

A test—not a blackout—is to be held some time Sunday night but the hour is to remain a secret so that it will be a thorough test to determine if the recruits are on the alert.

Each member of the Emergency Police will have a card on which he will place the number of his button and when the Area Chief visits the various posts Sunday night, to see if the men are at their posts each man will hand over his card to the area chief, at the same time calling out his number and the ward.

The Emergency Police have no authority to make arrests or direct traffic on Sunday night. They are merely to stand at their post and report. Other duties will be outlined for the men in future tests.

Those who do not respond Sunday night and who do not have a good excuse will be dropped from the list.

Recruits calling for their badges and hats are requested to bring their identification and location cards.

OBSERVATION POSTS OPERATED BY SOBY POST OF LEGION

Flights of Planes Observed
Are Flashed To Army
Headquarters

DURING MANEUVERS

Legionnaires and Boy Scouts,
Working in Shifts, Scan
The Sky

LANGHORNE, Oct. 15.—Field glasses continue to be pointed sky-ward in this area as they have been throughout the past week, as an effort is made to spot "enemy bombers."

Daily at two airplane observation posts near here, Legionnaires aided by Boy Scouts are scanning the sky, and keeping ears tuned to the hum of airplane motors of members of Jesse W. Soby, No. 148, American Legion, co-operates with the United States army during maneuvers this week.

Every flight of planes is considered a potential enemy contingent, with none eliminated unless the drone from the heavens proves to come from a lone commercial craft. Otherwise every flight noted is flashed with the greatest of speed by telephone to army headquarters, locations of which are not divulged to the "spotters."

The two observation posts which Soby Post members are maintaining are at the Buck Hotel, near Feasterville; and at Langhorne Gardens, Lincoln Highway.

At each post there are on duty every minute between six a. m. and six p. m., two Legionnaires and one Boy Scout, each with a pair of field glasses slung about his shoulders, ready to raise to eye level when the drone of a motor is heard. The trio operate in shifts of approximately three hour lengths. The Scouts on duty are from Langhorne Troop, No. 1, the lads being ex-copied from school classes so they may cooperate.

Should plane motors be heard, the sky is quickly scanned, through powerful glasses, and the trio checks on number of craft; the type, whether single, bi- or multi-motored; the altitude, whether very low, low, high or very high; direction of planes from the observation post and distance; and the direction in which they are travelling. This information together with the post code name, and the fact of whether the planes were seen or just heard is immediately sent to army headquarters, so that pursuit planes can be dispatched at once to "down" the theoretical "enemy."

With information forms filled in as the observation is made, one of the trio signals the telephone operator, who when she sees the specifically marked jacks light up gives such call preference. With the observer informing the operator "Army flash," prompt hook-up is made with army headquarters, and the message is almost instantaneously given officials, so that "pursuit planes" can get off the ground from bases strategically located.

"Speed is what counts," stated one of the Legionnaires on duty this morning at Langhorne Gardens. "The telephone operator responds as swiftly as the receiver is lifted here, and our information is flashed through."

Outlined on the concrete porch of this observation post are the points of the compass, and such points also appear on a desk indoors. Thus the direction in which planes are travelling is readily checked.

At army headquarters at various points along the Eastern seaboard, courses of planes are noted, and miniature planes are moved from point to point on large map outlines, as various posts report observing such. Thus the operations of not only the "enemy" craft is watched closely, but likewise the activity of "pursuit" craft. "Plotting observers," located on balconies watching huge maps in the various army headquarters thus plot or follow operations.

The Legionnaires and their Scout assistants realize the importance of the activity, knowing that in case of emergency civilian observers will be called to aid the army in this type of work. When a representative of The Bristol Courier called at Langhorne Gardens observation post this morning, credentials were asked for, the Legionnaires remarking "You may be a German spy, so we must be careful." Satisfied with credentials they at once proceeded to give all possible aid, and showed in detail how the work is carried on. "It certainly is not monotonous as some would suppose," volunteered one of the men. "There have been several flights of planes daily as

HOWDY, MARS

Second in brilliance only to the moon, the planet Mars rules the eastern sky for a spell, shining as it will not shine for Northern Hemisphere eyes for another seventeen years. For the third time in four years earth's neighbor on the way out from the sun has come within a scant 38,130,000 miles, which is not so near as in 1939 or 1937, but nearer by almost 200,000,000 miles than when at its greatest distance.

Its nearness and the fact that it is higher in the heavens, with less of the earth's atmosphere intervening, give it briefly a greater brightness than Jupiter or Venus.

Whereas two years ago Mars was so low in the South that only one observatory, in South Africa, could get a good view of it, now it is a fair target for any telescope in the North. No doubt its so-called canals are scrutinized nightly and no doubt spectroscopes are working overtime to snatch another secret or two from its light.

The astronomers are none too likely to find out anything new about Mars this time, but seventeen years hence it may be a different story if by that time the electron microscope, thousands of times more powerful than the old type, has been applied to the telescope.

ARMISTICE RUMORS

The report that Germany offered to stop its war on Russia on terms similar to those which the French accepted was well fortified with qualifications, but it should be carefully considered. The report came from Ankara. It originated in diplomatic circles, where it was rumored that Germany had made the offer indirectly and that Russia had flatly rejected the proposal.

Russia is in position to drive a hard bargain with Britain and the United States. Stalin well knows that although the democracies dislike his political system, he is fighting their fight and they will do all that they can to keep him in the war. But he also knows something more important, something that the leaders of the democracies and of the Axis powers are keeping in mind all the time.

Stalin knows that Russian morale broke in the winter of 1917-18, that at Brest-Litovsk, on March 3, 1918, Russia signed away 56,000,000 of her people and 455,000 square miles of territory to make peace, and that this desertion of the Allies released the German east army for the drive in France and Belgium which all but succeeded. The arrival of the Americans in force saved the day.

The Red leaders of Russia are carrying on not to help democracy but to save communism and their own necks.

thority and in capacity to Mr. Baruch, who held that responsibility in 1918. Throughout the whole organization there isn't a single clear-headed man who does not know these three things to be true and is not appalled at the needless waste of time, effort and money. They are disputed only by the New Deal politicians and White House sycophants, whose numbers have been greatly enhanced since the "unlimited emergency" was proclaimed. Fear of the Presidential displeasure keeps the frustrated businessmen from publicly speaking out in protest, but privately neither they nor the able departmental officials make any secret of their discouragement.

SO far as the centralized authority in a single individual head is concerned, the hope was that this basic deficiency, from which so much of the futility and confusion derives, would be corrected by the selection of Mr. Donald Nelson as executive secretary of the SPAB. It was indicated that in Mr. Nelson at last had been found the man to run the show; that he lacked neither the authority nor the ability; that under his alleged forceful personality the days of duplication and lack of direction were about to end. In the first month the publicity department, headed by Mr. Horton, depicted Mr. Nelson as a human dynamo who could be depended upon to make things hum. Various stories of the swiftness with which he eliminated red tape and reduced the accumulated mass of unanswered letters were printed all over the country.

FOR awhile there was a real expect-

SENATE STENOGRAPHER by MAXWELL THAYER

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Neither Gale nor Murray felt like working and when Gale told him that Colburn wanted the bill moved, he merely said he'd tend to it and sat where he was, staring out the window.

Gale grabbed for the telephone when it rang, some subconscious thought telling her it must be Joe Nash, and it was.

She agreed to meet him in the Walnut room of the hotel as soon as she could get away. He arrived there ahead of her and had selected a table in the shadows near the wall when she entered. He arose and went toward her.

"The table's over here," he said, and led her toward it.

Both ordered and when the waiter had gone, Gale looked up at him. "Joe," she said, "I'm dying of curiosity."

He grinned back at her and then his face became serious.

"Gale, I wish you'd quit your job and come to work for me."

"But, Joe," she replied, "I get a good salary, and I don't know whether it would be a good idea for me to work for you or not."

"It would be better than working for the wrong people, wouldn't it? At least you'll have a job you know is well, the right kind."

"Just a minute, please," Gale paused as the waiter brought their order. "I don't know what you mean by 'the right kind,' but I do know that I'm treated very well and am earning good money."

"Any one who works for Colburn makes money," he said it quickly, and when Gale's face showed cold resentment, he made matters worse by reaching across the table, patting her hand and going on. "I shouldn't have said that. I was only thinking of you. Colburn is a politician-for-pay and Murray is no better. I hate to have you associate with that tribe."

Gale got up from the table. "I thank you for your concern," she said, "but I must be going." And she left an astonished secretary to the governor sitting there.

Gale hadn't left the Walnut Room half a block behind before she slowed her walk, half-decided to go back. She was thinking that she wanted to keep Joe Nash; but she didn't want to keep him by surrendering, and running to him for a job. She wondered why she had resented his criticism of Murray and Colburn. They didn't mean anything to her.

At the corner, she stopped and looked back toward the hotel entrance but there was no sign of Joe, so she reluctantly walked on toward her apartment.

Gale did not hear from him that night, although she sat by the telephone and attempted to convince herself into thinking she was reading a magazine. Several times she was tempted to phone him but each time she stopped.

Next morning, as soon as she could dress, she made a bee-line for the coffee shop where he said he ate frequently. He wasn't there, so she ate alone, scanning the morning paper. Her one happiness was that the morning paper said nothing about the fight. The matter, she hoped, was dead.

Elaine, who told her that Murray's bill would be on the Senate floor for debate at 2 o'clock and that they'd go hear it together. Gale agreed and hurried on to her office where she dialed the governor's office but a female voice informed her, "Mr. Nash is out to lunch" and asked if there was any message. Gale said "no" and hung up, her heart aching. She wondered if Joe had taken someone else to lunch.

Elaine broke into the mood by announcing they had better hurry. When Gale entered the Senate gallery with Elaine, she saw Joe Nash below her and beside him, smiling, into his face, was Marie Gibbins. Gale's heart sank and she turned to go when Elaine pressed her arm. "Something's up!" she exclaimed.

Elaine, pointing, "Look, there's Joe Nash, next to him the Attorney General and next to him Captain Buckle of the State Bureau of Criminal Investigation. They don't sit in the gallery and listen to every bill."

Gale's knees felt weak. She welcomed the seat into which Elaine half pushed her. She was full of worry, fear and jealousy, and could not take her eyes off of the quartet below. Every time Marie pulled on Joe's lapel or tugged at his arm to whisper in his ear, Gale felt a tug at her heart strings.

Marie had been Murray's stenographer before her and Gale felt that Joe might be playing Marie for information; but then she remembered that Elaine had told her Marie was set on getting Joe.

Maybe the only reason he wanted her, Gale, to leave Murray and to come to work for him was to pump her on what the big lobby group was doing.

She tried to concentrate on what Senator Murray was saying: "... so gentlemen, I offer this bill. I feel it will fill a long felt public need, will increase the revenue to the state and will harm no one..."

Gale noticed a black wreath on a senator's desk and supposed it was where Senator Smiley once sat.

She wondered at Murray's colossal nerve. There he stood, straight and dignified, his right hand resting on his desk, speaking calmly that wreath, misinforming the Senate about a bill that would benefit one company and one man mainly.

Gale looked down on Nash and his companions, noticed they were engrossed in the address, and turned her attention back to Murray who was thundering:

"I have given of my time and my energy for a mere pittance because I believed it my patriotic duty. This is my last session. This is my last bill. I feel that if this measure is made the law, I shall retire to private practice, stepping aside for some younger and, I hope, some abler man."

"While this measure has great merit, I am making this a personal plea, that you approve it and give me the satisfaction of having accomplished the last good I can while a member of this body."

He sat down amidst applause and the lieutenant governor called for the roll, the chief clerk beginning his drone of names.

Gale did not know the bill had tation that Mr. Nelson would measure up to these advance notices.

But the expectation has not been fulfilled. Most definitely he has not developed into the individual responsible directing head, comparable to Mr. Baruch, and no amount of publicity describing him as a "hard-hitting, two-fisted, red-blooded he-man" is going to make him such. Everybody connected with defense now recognizes that his directorship is limited and not complete. The reasons are clear. For one thing, he has never been told by the President that he is the sole boss whom he wants to go ahead and do the job. Nor has he been told anything like that by Mr. Wallace, chairman of the SPAB. Actually, he is a subordinate who does not report directly to the President at all and who can operate without interference just so long as he does not clash with the views of Mr. Wallace and other New Deal members.

Robert Wintersteen, who is an employee of "Lucky Teter," and who is now located in the Carolinas, is spending a few days at the home of his sister, Mrs. Charles E. Bruce.

A cabinet meeting of the Bristol Group of Epworth League was held at the home of the president, Miss Dorothy Lovett, on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Baker, Parkland, were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Baker.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Waldratt entertained Mr. Waldratt's parents of Trenton, N. J., at dinner on Sunday.

Raymond Hibbs and son Kenneth, Bristol, were Saturday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Wink.

David Johnson, Edgely, was a week-end guest of "Jimmie" Booz.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Connor are spending two weeks with friends in Harrisburg.

John A. Vasant, Hulmeville, was a Sunday dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Keen.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Doyle and son, Bristol, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bruce.

THE natural result of this situation is that Mr. Nelson plays a cautious game, is careful not to assume too much in the way of authority, or display too much individual initiative or enterprise. In addition, those who have observed him most closely say that he is slightly bewildered, which, after all, considering the size of the job and his lack of power, is not surprising. It seems fairly certain that from Mr. Nelson there will come no action displeasing to the New Deal politicians, who are in the majority on his board and in the Administration. At least, such is the view of some of his colleagues, who in the interests of results, sought to have him assert himself in a big way, only to be met with the New Dealish statement that "after all, we have got to hold fast to our social gains."

Observation Posts Operated By Soby Post of Legion

The army maneuvers have kept up since last Thursday. The largest number of planes we spotted was nine."

The men are volunteering for the work in free time. This morning a railroad employee who is on a late afternoon "shift" was on duty with a school janitor, who was released from duties for a few hours. When some men find their time cut short, some of the Legionnaires who are engaged in business in this area relieve them. The Boy Scout, however, found his duty not complete when his three hours were concluded, for he had been instructed by his teacher to write an essay on the activity.

Commander of Soby Post, William Gaston, is directing the work, he being chief observer at Langhorne Gardens. Richard A. Hopkins is chief observer at the Buck Hotel; and assisting the two in arrangements is Roscoe L. Horner. All Legionnaires are co-operating in whatever manner possible. Fifteen hundred such observation posts are located during maneuvers along the eastern seaboard between Washington, D. C., and Boston, Mass.

Bride's Entertaining Success Depends On Meal's Main Dish

Undoubtedly the bride's proudest experience is entertaining her husband's friends, whether they are old school mates or new business associates. These dinners are not only fun and a pleasant way of showing what a skilled homemaker she is, but they are often a very effective and common sense way of doing her part in contributing to his business and social success.

Many a young hostess who is adept at preparing "fancy dishes" for luncheon parties or for her bridge clubs is less confident when it comes to planning a company dinner. But she need have no fear of undertaking a dinner party if she takes care to select and prepare the meat course well. For if the meat dish is delicious, the whole meal is a success, in the opinion of most men.

This is not a difficult task for some of the finest meat dishes are most easily prepared. A brown and tender rib roast of beef, pork loin, leg of lamb or veal roast are all excellent main dishes, and the easy modern way of roasting makes their preparation a simple matter. The roast is placed on a rack in an uncovered pan and roasted in a slow oven to the desired degree of doneness. The fat side is placed upmost so that there is no need to baste the meat.

For more quickly prepared meals, perfectly broiled steak or chops form a substantial basis for a delicious meal.

For a young homemaker, whose cooking repertory may be limited, it is a good idea to have a few special main dishes which she can rely upon when a dinner is to be planned in a hurry. One, which is a little bit special without being too fussy or difficult, is a combination grill of lamb steaks, suggested by Inez S. Willson, home economist. This combination can be served on a plank or a fireproof platter.

- Planked Lamb Steaks
- 2 lamb steaks
  - 2 tomatoes
  - Asparagus tips
  - 2 cups hot rice potatoes
  - 2 tablespoons butter
  - 3 egg yolks
  - Salt and pepper

Have slices from leg of lamb cut 1 to 2 inches thick. Brown on one side in a hot pan. Season and transfer, with the brown side down, to a heated plank or fire-proof platter. Place tomato halves around the steaks and asparagus tips arranged in bundles. Dot these with butter. Add butter, egg yolks and seasoning to potatoes and heat. Make a border around the other foods on the plank with these potatoes by forcing them through a pastry tube. Place in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) or under the broiler to brown and finish cooking the lamb steaks and to heat the vegetables.

Another delicious main dish with a touch of style, easy to prepare even for a beginning cook is broiled ham slices with bananas. This may be pan-broiled.

Ham a la Stanley

- 1 center cut ham slice
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- Brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 2 bananas

The ham slice should be from one-fourth to one-half inch thick. Rub the mustard into the ham, then brown it slowly on both sides in a heavy skillet. When browned, sprinkle with brown sugar moistened with lemon juice. Around the ham place bananas which have been cut in halves lengthwise and again crosswise and dipped in brown sugar. Continue cooking until the bananas are heated through. Serve as a garnish with the ham. A slice of ham one-half inch thick requires 20 minutes to panbroil.

Expect Turkey Supply Will Be Plentiful

HARRISBURG, Oct. 15—(INS)—Indications are that there will be ample turkey to grace the festive board in Pennsylvania homes on Thanksgiving Day.

According to Department of Agriculture reports, 997,000 turkeys were raised in the Keystone State this year which is an eight per cent increase above last year's figures. Prices received by farmers for the birds averaged about two cents a pound more than in 1940.

And the turkeys will probably carry more meat this year as farmers report a growing popularity of the broad-breasted type. In addition there are 4,193,000 pounds of turkey held in cold storage in the Middle Atlantic States.

An ample supply of vegetables and fruits also is assured Pennsylvanians this Winter despite the severe damage dealt the crops by drought.

Cold storage reports received by the Agriculture Department from Washington reveal that holdings of all varieties of frozen fruits on hand September 1st totaled 211,047,000 pounds and stocks of frozen vegetables grossed $3,480,000 pounds.

American cheese holdings were 151,737,000 pounds, the greatest reported at any time on record. Creamery butter stocks amounted to 200,539,000 pounds and stocks of all frozen and cured meats totaled 625,881,000 pounds.

The Department also revealed that 2,500,000 bushels of apples grown in the state last year were used by state canning factories, apple juice plants and cider mills. According to the Department, the state now occupies a leading position among apple growing states, both as to value and quality of processed and canned apples.

In the silence of the night he touched the safe. A moment later he was in the hands of the law—trapped by a warning flash at police headquarters, caught by harnessed lightning. Thus electricity protects life and property. Thus it serves in endless ways to make your modern way safer, happier. In hospitals its ample light guides the doctor's hand; to industry it brings round-the-clock operation and many a tool for better, faster production of defense needs; to the home it brings light, music, laughter . . . dozens of drudgery-saving conveniences that no other generation ever dreamed of enjoying.

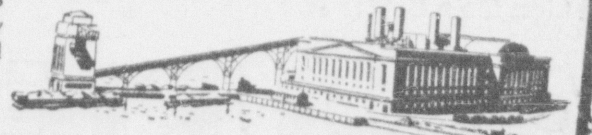

Electricity—all that it means—waits behind every plug and switch, ready to beat an egg or pull a train. To keep it there, adequately, dependably, cheaply, is the task of some seven thousand men and women who control, guide and measure the vast powers of Conowingo Dam and other great sources of electric energy. When you think of Philadelphia Electric, think of it in terms of these fellow-citizens whose skill in management, engineering training and everyday effort are expressed in an attitude of friendly helpfulness that often goes beyond the prescribed line of duty. Due to them, electricity serves you better and better at a cost that is constantly becoming less and less.

PHILADELPHIA ELECTRIC COMPANY

Your Patronage Helps Us Serve You Better

DO YOU KNOW... that in 10 years the price of residential electricity has gone down 36.5%, while its use in homes has more than doubled? One of P.E.'s many sources of electric power is this $30,000,000 Richmond Station, whose principal turbine (one of the world's largest) has produced, in 5 years, all the electricity 100,000 homes could use in two centuries.

BRIDGING THE GAP

It's good news for modern mothers that many of the difficulties of bridging the gap between a baby's semi-liquid diet and that of grown-ups are being eliminated by the use of new canned foods especially prepared for older babies. One does not have to plan the family menus around the youngest member's needs, then, or go to the trouble of preparing a separate meal for him, since these foods, known as Junior foods, make well-balanced meals and come in cans ready to heat and serve.

Naturally, they are prepared with a thought to their attractiveness to children and with the special care and equipment that are necessary to assure the highest possible nutritional value.

The time at which a baby is ready for his switch from strained foods to Junior foods is usually between his twelfth and eighteenth month. The change should not take place, however, without the approval of a doctor, since babies vary greatly in their tooth development and aptitude for chewing.

You have 12 different varieties of the Junior foods from which to select a baby's menu. Each helps to develop his liking for foods that are good for him. The chopped lamb and liver is made of both the meat and liver of lamb, and an even higher liver content is obtained by the addition of chicken livers. For added vitamin value and better flavor, some vegetables are also used in this combination.

For the child who does not care for cereals, the Junior food known as Chicken Farina Vegetable Porridge is excellent. It contains the meat and broth of selected chickens, certain vegetables and liberal amounts of Durum farina and wheat germ rich in vitamin B—and the whole combination is cooked in milk.

Creamed tomato and rice is another unusually nutritive food—combining tomato and rice with vegetables which enrich the flavor and give better balance, whey powder for added milk minerals and soy bean flour to increase the amount of digestible protein. It all makes a delicious flavor combination which children enjoy.

You have the flavor of good old-fashioned cream of potato soup in the creamed diced potatoes, and they contain liberal amounts of pure butter for added rich flavor and energy value. Good nutritive balance is provided by the use of milk, cream and brewer's yeast.

The child who is started on creamed green vegetables while he is at the Junior foods age is usually not the one who refuses the green vegetables later. You will find this combination of kale, green lettuce, green asparagus and peas with the nourishing milk and cream has a delightful flavor. Another green in the Junior food line is chopped spinach. With it, the leaves are cut into particles of such size that a moderate amount of chewing is required.

A variety of high quality vegetables goes into the Junior food known as creamed diced vegetables—and their creamy background is a liberal amount of milk mixed with part of the vegetables and rice of pureed texture. A yeast concentrate adds to the flavor and increases Vitamin B and G content. In contrast, the mixed vegetables are a nutritious blend of several vegetables without the creamy addition. The carrots have a coarse enough texture to encourage the child to do considerable chewing when he eats them.

Even desserts are listed among the Junior foods—fruit desserts which also contribute to a healthful balance of food nutrients for the child. Pineapple rice pudding has the refreshing flavor of Hawaiian pineapple combined with egg custard and rice. To make the prune pudding, choice prunes and farina are cooked in milk and enriched with eggs. This dessert is less laxative in effect than plain prunes and has an excellent nutritive balance. In the apple, fig and date dessert, you have the tempting richness of flavor—figs and dates given zest by tart apple and a bit of lemon. Children never tire of this combination.

HOME ON THE FARM

Intended for mild climates, no basement has been planned for this small farm house, one of a series sponsored by the National Homes Foundation. The half-acre offers an ideal, central location for a heater, adjacent to the chimney. An important characteristic of this house is its flexibility. The dining room can be used equally well as a third bedroom; space is available in the large kitchen, the rear porch, or at one end of the living room for serving meals. The rear porch also offers a location for laundry equipment and a closet for work clothes or food storage. For further information, address the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, 1337 Connecticut Avenue, Washington, D. C., referring to Design L-F2-S.

LOOK BEFORE YOU DRINK

SOUTH LONDONDERRY, Vt. — (INS) — The fate of a visitor to a local cheese factory recently should serve as a warning to thirsty citizens who visit cheese factories. The visitor spied what he thought was a keg of beer and acted quickly with a folding cup as an accessory. The keg contained rennet which is obtained from the lining of the stomachs of calves and is used to turn milk sour. The visitor was reported to be quite upset.

"Silver Through the Ages" Discussed Before Sorority

The meeting of the Sigma Nu Chi Sorority was held last evening at the home of Miss Anita Zug, Jackson street.

After a brief business meeting, other guests arrived to listen to the illustrated lecture of Pearson M. High, a representative of a well-known Philadelphia silver company.

Mr. High spoke on "Silver Through the Ages," showing that from the first occurrence of guests "sitting above the salt," right down to the present generation, sterling silver has been cherished. Mr. High displayed silver that was 121 years old, and commented on the differences in modernized processing.

A game was played, and Miss Evelyn Buck was awarded a silver spoon pin.

Later, a buffet luncheon was served to: Mrs. Frank Paulsworth, Mrs. Peter Firce, the Misses Evelyn Buck, Lucy Norato, Julia Houser, Nan Townsend, Anita Zug; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Zug, Bristol; Mrs. Ralph Hart, Bath Addition; the Misses Helen DeWitt and Evelyn Greenwood, Edgely; Miss Dolores Bound, Eddington; and Mr. High, Philadelphia.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Abbott and Costello and the Andrews Sisters, who scored such a sensational hit in Universal's "Buck Privates," have been reunited by the same company in Bud Abbott and Lou Costello and Dick Powell in "In the Navy." The picture comes today to the Bristol Theatre.

Sharing stellar position with Abbott and Costello is Powell, who plays his first singing role in several seasons.

GRAND THEATRE

Fast-talking Red Skelton, hailed as "funniest man on the stage," bids fair to annex the same title on the screen in "Whistling in the Dark," his first starring picture, now showing at the Grand Theatre.

The comedian has the opportunity to "give his all" in the hilarious story—and does just that.

He plays a radio "crime creator" captured by racketeers who want him to invent a "perfect murder" for practical purposes. His antics and adventures in turning the tables on the criminals and extricating himself, Ann Rutherford and Virginia Grey from their clutches, provides an evening of undiluted merriment.

When it does and has the approval of the leaders of both parties, thus assuring its passage by the Legislature, Governor James has promised to call a special session. . . . Lack of a new reapportionment plan will force the state to vote for 33 Congressmen at large in the 1942 elections.

The general wage increase decreed by Governor James for some 15,000 employees is expected to act as an impetus to private management and labor. . . . The Governor frankly admitted that state employees receiving less than $20 a week were "underpaid" and that they were entitled to an increase because of the rising cost of living. . . . The increase failed to satisfy most state employees, however, as it was pointed out that it only amounted to $1.15 a week. . . . In addition, lower-bracketed state employees now must pay a federal income tax to which they were previously immune.

State liquor store employees are demanding a four dollar increase in their $23 a week salaries. . . . They have threatened a two-hour protest to enforce their demands.

A reminder that Pennsylvania is not the only state which is having difficulty reapportioning its Congressional districts comes from New York, where a committee similar to Pennsylvania's is attempting to prepare suitable legislation. . . . The New York committee's work came to a halt for a

The shortage has been relieved from a $52,500 fund set up for that purpose. . . . The Pennsylvania committee is operating without a legislative appropriation, but if a special session is called to enact a reapportionment measure, it is estimated it will cost the state around $200,000.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS BUILDING HOCKEY TEAM FOR NEXT YEAR

Miss Phyllis Kallenbach Eager To Get A Strong Team To Enter League

HAVE A POOR FIELD
Basketball Teams Are Now Arranging A Schedule for the Season

By Thomas Juno

Bristol high school girls will endeavor to take their rightful place in sports in Bucks county.

You can take the word of the newly-appointed coach, Miss Phyllis Kallenbach, for that.

Miss Kallenbach has several reasons for wishing to see the girls' sports at the local institution, especially hockey, be on a par with the other schools of this section and the main one is that Bristol high is her Alma Mater.

The new Bristol instructor received her diploma from the local institution in 1934 and took a physical educational course at West Chester State Teachers College where she graduated in 1938. She taught one year at the Maryland Private School, near Langhorne.

Miss Kallenbach is a keen student of the hockey game, having played it when in high school and followed it closely in her college days. At the present time, she is an appointed referee of the Lower Bucks County League.

It is entirely impossible for the girls' mentor to organize a hockey eleven this season, but daily during "gym" classes and after school hours, Miss Kallenbach has the girls practicing the fundamentals and finer points of the game. Miss Kallenbach not only shows the girls how to use the sticks but actually participates in the scrimmages and many times gets a bang on her shins from an inexperienced stick-wielder.

The only games that the local school will play in hockey will be intramural, while at the close of the season Miss Kallenbach will pick an all-star team to play a regular game with Bensalem high school. Miss Kallenbach is anxious to let her girls see action in competition and so the game with the Owlettes was arranged although Bensalem has one of the best teams in the county.

Next season, however, according to Miss Kallenbach, the team will enter the Lower Bucks County League.

At the present time, Miss Kallenbach is concentrating more of her hockey teachings to the eighth, ninth, and tenth grades, and part of the eleventh. The senior will leave school in June and Mrs. Kallenbach cannot figure on any of these for a strong formidable outfit although there is plenty of good material in the senior class. The intra-mural games are expected to get started next week.

But Miss Kallenbach has plenty of work on her hands. The spirit of the girls is at the lowest ebb and must be built up. Hockey had practically been given up as a lost sport, not even goal posts were available and recently nine hockey sticks were purchased. More sticks were ordered but because of priority rights of the government only nine were available.

While Miss Kallenbach was being interviewed, a player walked in with a bruised leg which needed attending to. The girl explained that she had fell while chasing the hockey ball. The writer walked out to the field and saw the reason for it. The side of the field where the girls practice hockey is nothing but a miniature "gravel pit." And in order to have good hockey teams, arrangements must be made to have a decent field on which to play.

Daily Miss Kallenbach is receiving inquiries concerning basketball. Miss Kallenbach's predecessor had a wonderful basketball record and last season tied Bensalem for the Lower Bucks girls' championship. Miss Kallenbach is now arranging the schedule for the team and intends to be in the upper division of the Bucks' circuit.

FALLSINGTON HIGH DEFEATS TRENTON XI

By Jack Gill

The flying Falcons of Fallsington High School defeated the Trenton Sophomores team at Fallsington yesterday afternoon by a 41 to 7 score. Little Joe Napoli ran wild during the first half and tabbed three touchdowns to pace the Orange attack.

Mike DeRisi was highly satisfied with the work of his light squad, Napoli in particular shone throughout the entire fray. The Fallsington coach used twenty-six men in the rout.

Napoli opened the scoring in the first quarter by tallying on reverse from the ten and fifteen yard markers. In the second half he sped eighteen yards around his own left end and clutched an extra point pass from Art Driscoll. As the half ended, he walked off the field satisfied at scoring 19 of his teams 20 points.

Mansmann and Monti scored in the last two chukkers on short runs, and Art Driscoll sped forty yards on a pass interception in the third quarter. The same Driscoll place kicked three successive extra points through the cross-bars in the final half. Big George Kineavy, captain of the invading eleven, went across from the one yard line late in the last quarter for Trenton's only score.

TRIPLE TIE EXISTS IN HOCKEY LEAGUE

A triple tie now exists in the Lower Bucks County Girls' Hockey League. Two of the clubs, Bensalem and Buckingham, clash this afternoon on the Bensalem field. New Hope, the other club, which is enjoying the deadlock, meets Fallsington.

The game today and the one with New Hope next week will be important factors in the Bensalem schedule and Coach Helen Smith has put her club through extra practice sessions to be ready for this pair of tilts.

The schedule for today includes: Buckingham at Bensalem, Fallsington at New Hope, Richboro at Newtown, Langhorne at Southampton.

PREDICTS GOOD FISHING IN SILVER LAKE

"There should be good fishing in Silver Lake within the next two years," declared John J. Wopart, superintendent of the Torresdale State Fish Hatchery, when he addressed members of the Bristol Fish and Game Protective Association at their regular monthly meeting at the Odd Fellows Hall, Radcliffe street.

Wopart told of the great strides made in recent years by Pennsylvania Fish Commission hatcheries in the propagation of game fish, particularly bass. A large number of members were present to hear his talk and also to enjoy sound pictures shown after the business meeting.

Further explaining his remarks on prospects of good fishing in Silver Lake, Wopart pointed out that the Commission hopes to be able to stock all legal size bass in public fishing waters within the next two years. At present the bass are usually about three to four inches in length when stocked.

"Next year the hatcheries expect to put bass on a 24-hour diet to see if they cannot be grown bigger in one year," Wopart said.

"About 700,000 three-inch bass will leave the hatcheries this season. And we are now building reserves, so that within two years we hope to stock all legal size bass, just as the Commission now stocks all legal size trout."

Commenting on the condition of low water that has prevailed in the canal for the past several weeks, Wopart pointed out that unless the level is greatly raised, either by sufficient rains or by artificial methods, that the bass and pickerel in this stretch of water will die this winter.

The speaker also told members that 1800 beaver, or sunfish, will be delivered to Bristol this Saturday for stocking in Silver Lake and the canal. Less than two weeks ago Silver Lake received its first stocking of bass since the lake was drained and rebuilt, when 1800 3-inch bass were planted there.

Members of the association who have not yet made their returns on the tickets for the recent outing were requested to do so at once. Announcement was also made by John Johnson, secretary, who presided at last evening's session in the absence of Donald Moyer, that the club will hold a shoot this Sunday on the club grounds at Asay's Farm, across from Silver Lake.

Through the efforts of C. W. Winter, prominent local sportsman, pictures were obtained from the Philadelphia Electric Company showing the beautiful country of Alaska. The pictures were shown by Mr. Bartolet, Philadelphia Electric Company representative. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.
